MIX IT UP

What is it about?

This exposition consists of seven mobile stands, which - in a very attractive way – explain issues connected with music and physics of sounds. All the stands within this exposition are interactive and they demand manual, motor, sensory and intellectual involvement.

Sightseers will be able to convince themselves with their own teeth that sound travels not only in the air but also in solid mater. Visitors will be able to hear their hearts' beating, to check the strength of their voice, and to compose music using professional mixers. The sightseers will also be able to digitalise their voice, which will make them laughing a whole lot while leaving this exposition!

IT'S SO SIMPLE

What is it about?

This exhibition consist of 26 showpieces that are divided in four themes: "TechWorld", " I'm Thinking!", "Mechanical Playground" and "Think, Understand, Do It". All themes are in a various coloring, which makes easier for visitors to assigned a showpiece to each sector. The base of this exposition's system are bricks from a computer game called Tetris. The exhibition's name is a noticeable credo of the showpieces and their content, yet it doesn't mean that the exposition is trivial. On the contrary, through the interaction with this exposition visitors could gain deep understanding of scientific and technical phenomenon, which the knowledge they will gain independently by making choices among the showpieces and combining particular sectors so as to build a new thematic entirety. Exploring the exhibition and interacting with individual showpieces, the sightseers accumulate knowledge in an active manner, with a wide smile on their faces.
